TS III. Topics in Theology 2/5-6; 3/4-5; 4/15-16; 5/6

The purpose of this course is to help students [lay, clergy, seminarians] understand the theological, sociological, and economic roots of violence. We want students to understand the range and depth of what we mean when we say "violence," including economic, political, interpersonal, religious, and state-sponsored dimensions. We also want to educate students to help them stay safe and to help stop the cycle of violence.

Prereq: 21-505

2015-2016

This course is designed to provide students with an opportunity to become knowledgeable about the origins of the Wesleyan tradition and its expressions in The United Methodist Church. It explores the roots of the movement in the Anglican Church and the Wesleyan Revival of the 18th century, and the history of the institutional and theological development of American Methodist/Evangelical United Brethren tradition through the beginning of the 21st century.

This course is designed to make the student familiar with the theology of John Wesley by becoming familiar with his sermons, a doctrinal standard in the United Methodist Church. This will become a starting point for understanding Methodist theology in general, which is characterized by a theological method that seeks to contextualize the Christian faith in a connectional structure of the church.

This course is designed to provide students with the opportunity to fulfill the learning goals described by the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry of The United Methodist Church for fulfillment of the Polity requirement. We will focus on the broader ecology of the ecclesiological forms, governance configurations, membership and orders as they are expressions of the United Methodist expression of Christian mission. The student's use and growing familiarity with the Book of Discipline (2012 edition) and Book of Resolutions is an essential requirement and expectation of the course.

Cross-cultural immersion experiences in various ministries and communities with theological reflection. May be repeated.

Introduction to the legal, historical, poetic, and prophetic books of Hebrew Scriptures, with emphasis on the order and contents, cultural settings, literary forms, religious themes, and interpretive approaches.
