COURSE DESCRIPTION

This online course builds and broadens the biblical and theological bases from which the practice of ministry grows. Through exposure of various models of biblical interpretation and theological reflection, this course seeks to help students natural move between theological reflection and praxis.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

- Knowing –
 - To assist students in developing an ethical approach to biblical interpretation which considers both the historical contexts in which texts were written and the contemporary contexts in which they are to be applied.
 - To familiarize students with the prominent approaches to theological reasoning (e.g. narrative, process, correlational, political) as well as key methodological questions (e.g. determining a proper use of social scientific information) involved in the practice of theology in the present.
- Doing –
 - To increase proficiency in ethical biblical interpretation through the use of multiple methodologies: historical-critical, literary, and post-modern methods and in consideration of historical and contemporary contexts; and
 - To increase proficiency in thinking, communicating, and acting theologically about the many pastoral, congregational, and socio-political issues facing ministers today.
- Being –
 - To deepen personal knowledge of and faithfulness to the God who is Father/Mother, Son, and Holy Spirit.
 - To become more aware of the biblical and theological constructs of faith and practice that undergird the work of ministry in the church ecclesially and beyond into non-traditional areas of ministry.

COURSE OUTCOMES

At the conclusion of this course, you should be able to:

1. Better exegete Scripture from both the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament and the New Testament utilizing multiple methodologies: historical-critical, literary, and post-modern methods and through learning more contextual techniques.
2. Articulate at least three contemporary approaches to theological reasoning, documenting both strengths and weaknesses in their applicability to ministry.
3. Describe a theological method appropriate to your anticipated research project taking into consideration contextual strengths and weaknesses so as to demonstrate appropriate use.
4. Demonstrate the ability to engage fellow ministers in theological reflection through careful listening, respectful questioning, and helpful suggestion.
5. Document personal spiritual engagement in the practice of theology through reflection on the theological issues raised in your context of ministry.

COURSE ASSIGNMENTS

- 1) Students will post two documents that help to explain their ministry context at the beginning of the semester:
 - a. A description of the student's ministry setting, including their role, length of time there, and a general sketch of regular pastoral/leadership activities (2-3 pages)
 - b. A brief outline of the student's anticipated research project (1-2 pages)
- 2) Students will provide three (3) critical book reviews (3 – 5 pages//1500 – 2500 words) on the following texts based on the instructions in the syllabus:
 - Osmer, Richard R. Practical Theology: An Introduction;
 - Graham, Elaine, Heather Walton, and Frances Ward, eds. Theological Reflection: Methods; and
 - Anderson, Cheryl B. Ancient Laws and Contemporary Controversies: The Need for Inclusive Biblical Interpretation 1st Edition.

- Instructions for Critical Summaries

Critical summaries should:

- a) Provide a narrative overview of the whole of the book. Strive for balance throughout rather than focusing your summary on one or two chapters of the book. The primary aim is to set out the big picture.
 - b) Do not use lengthy quotations from the book. Rather summarize them in your own words and footnote the reference. The purpose of the summaries and papers are to add your voice to an ongoing conversation and to increase your learning, they are not to “proof-text” your point.
 - c) If you do reference specific pages in the book, include those page numbers in parenthesis (do not include the title and/or author). No other sources should be consulted or referenced.
 - d) In the last ½ to 1 page, you may raise questions and make critical observations about the book.
 - e) Remember: Avoid “church-eze” or “sermonizing” in your summaries. Your papers are not sermons, but academic papers that demonstrate you understand the author's main argument from her point of view and then critically engage the argument from your perspective.
- 3) An initial draft of your theology chapter will be due March 16 (5 – 10 pages). This paper is an early attempt at constructing the ideas that will form your writing. In consultation with the instructor and likely your advisor, students will choose a book from a contemporary or recent major theologian to serve as a conversation partner in writing the theology paper. Students must also utilize at least 1 – 2 of the theological methods from Graham's Theological Methods.
 - 4) In consultation with the instructor and likely your advisor, students will exegete two biblical texts that will serve as conversation partners in writing the final paper. For the Old Testament text, students must use at least 2 methods from A Handbook to Old Testament Exegesis by William P. Brown. For the New Testament text, students must use at least 2 methods from Searching for Meaning: An Introduction to Interpreting the New Testament by Paula Gooder. Students must also utilize diverse (i.e., racial, ethnic, gender, class, sexual orientation) as a part of their analysis while also keeping in mind their own social location and the social location of the people of their proposed project.

The exegesis of both texts will be in one (1) paper (10-15 pages).

Please see Guidelines for Exegesis for directions on how to write the exegetical papers and for the grading rubric. For more assistance, please contact your advisor or the Garrett-Evangelical Writing Center.

- 5) A final paper that will serve as an initial draft of the biblical and theological framework for your final thesis project (15-20 pages). In this paper, students should demonstrate an ability to utilize at least three of the theological approaches discussed in class (Outcome #1 above); the ability to articulate a clear theological rationale and framework for your own research (Outcomes #2 & 4 above); the ability to exegete a Biblical periscope that is pertinent to your final project. Further guidelines for this paper will be provided during the class. This paper should utilize the analysis from the previous papers.

December 1, 2021: OT/NT Exegetical Paper Due (Self Study) (10 – 15 pages) Due by December 1, 2021 by 12:00 noon CST

Due:

In consultation with the instructor and likely your advisor, students will exegete two biblical texts that will serve as conversation partners in writing the final paper. For the Old Testament text, students must use at least 2 methods from A Handbook to Old Testament Exegesis by William P. Brown. For the New Testament text, students must use at least 2 methods from Searching for Meaning: An Introduction to Interpreting the New Testament by Paula Gooder. Students must also utilize diverse (i.e., racial, ethnic, gender, class, sexual orientation) as a part of their analysis while also keeping in mind their own social location and the social location of the people of their proposed project. The exegesis of both texts will be in one (1) paper (10-15 pages). (See Assignment #4 above)

Also, keep in mind that this is an exegetical paper, not a sermon. Therefore, you should be referencing academic work (commentaries, articles, etc.). Given that every student has access to Ebsco/ATLA and Moodle databases and that this is a graduate doctoral program, resources used are not to include Wikipedia, popular press articles or simple online Bible tools or reference materials. If you include these, your grade will be decreased.

Please see Guidelines for Writing Exegetical Papers from the Garrett-Evangelical Writing Center for assistance and grading rubric.

December 15, 2021: Final Paper Due

A final paper that will serve as an initial draft of the biblical and theological framework for your final thesis project (20-25 pages). In this paper, students should demonstrate an ability to utilize at least three of the theological approaches discussed in class (Outcome #1 above); the ability to articulate a clear theological rationale and framework for your own research (Outcomes #2 & 4 above); the ability to exegete a Biblical periscope that is pertinent to your final project. Further guidelines for this paper will be provided during the class. This paper should utilize the analysis from the previous papers. (See Assignment #5 above)

COURSE GRADING:

Introductory Assignment:	10%
Initial Theology Paper:	20%
Critical Book Reviews (3 @ 10% each):	30%
OT/NT Exegetical Paper:	15%
Final Paper:	25%

Grading Criteria for Written Assignments

1. Each answer offers a clear thesis statement, follows a logical organization, is well developed, and is free of grammatical and spelling errors.
2. You enter into intelligent, critical conversation with the course texts.
3. You demonstrate a depth of theological and pastoral insight in your critical analysis and constructive claims.

Please note that although I will assign a letter grade to each assignment, this course is Pass/Fail.
